Prospect of Future Tax Increases Highlights Issues in FY93 Budget

by Diane Oberg

City expenditures would increase by 6.2% over the current year, to $11.4 million, under the fiscal year 1994 (FY94) budget proposal presented by City Manager Daniel Hobbs to the Greenbelt City Council on March 29. In most departments the number of employees will hold constant, although additional part time staff will be added to the recreation department when the fitness center opens.

The reserve funds should be the focus of more attention than usual during this budget review. If all goes as expected, the city will take possession of Center School this summer. If Hobbs' proposal is approved, the city will sell $3 million in bonds to finance renovation of the building for use as a community center. Repayment of these bonds will require Hobbs estimates, the equivalent of five cents on the city's tax rate. Operating the community center will require another five cents, starting with FY95.

The above does not mean that taxes will rise five cents this year. Council can delay the repayment until the next fiscal year and can reallocate some reserve funds to bond repayment.

Another important consideration regarding the capital funds is that both this year and last many city departments eliminated or reduced their contributions to the replacement fund in order to balance their budgets. The replacement fund contains money set aside for replacing durable equipment. The reduced contributions may place additional pressures on future years' budgets.

Increased Cost Items

A number of factors affect all accounts including Hobbs' proposal that all employees receive a 1.5% cost of living increase effective July 1. A 15

COMMUNITY CENTER FUNDING ANNOUNCED

In a letter to Maryland State Senator Leo Green, Governor William Donald Schaefer has advised that $688,875 will be made available for the renovation of Greenbelt Center School as a community center, a project described by the Governor as "very worthwhile."

Included in the total amount is a state bond issue authorization of $150,000 made in 1990, and $380,875 for an adult day care center and $288,000 for a senior citizen activity center included in the fiscal year 1994 state budget.

percent increase in employee health insurance premiums also is expected. Hobbs also proposes upgrading a number of clerical positions as a result of a reclassification study.

Public Safety

The public safety account, which funds the police department, animal warden and the city's contribution to the fire department, represents roughly one-third of the operating budget. Hobbs' proposed budget would increase funding for the department by roughly 6.7 percent, to $3.8 million. The number of authorized positions will drop by one from current levels, as one police cadet position is eliminated. Two officer positions authorized but not filled last year will be eliminated. Five new police cars will be purchased.

At its March 29 meeting, council authorized the department to apply for another grant from the Governor's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission. This grant was not included in the budget proposal, but it could result in adding another officer position with the city having to pay one-quarter of the cost.

The budget proposal does not include a number of items requested by the department and the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP) valued at over $370,000. Proposals requested by the FOP include increasing the number of officers by one to maintain the same number of sworn officer positions that existed prior to the conversion of one position to civilian status, night differential pay and expansion of the take home car programs. The department would like to have funded four more cars, two more officers for a traffic unit, plus an additional communications officer, riot gear and pay incentives for officer participation in a fitness program.

PRINTING PROBLEMS DELAY DELIVERY

by Mary Lou Williamson

The late delivery of the News Review during the past two weeks was the result of problems at the printer. Not the family-run Allen Printing Service that sets the type for this newspaper and does everything up to the final process of printing. The actual printing has been done by the Record Printing Company of Silver Spring since late 1979, when we needed more copies of the News Review than the Allen's could print in a day.

A broken automatic paper folder held up completion of the printing the first week. The problem last week was of another magnitude. The Record went out of business. The company arranged for their many newspapers to be printed by other firms around the state.

Allen Printing, the print shop that has been responsible for printing the News Review ever since it graduated from the mimeograph machine 50 years ago, was left guessing where the News Reviews would go. They learned on Friday the paper was printed in Easton by Chesapeake Publishing Corporation. A Chesapeake truck, laden with 10,500 copies of the Greenbelt News Review arrived in Hyattsville only to see a "Closed Fridays" sign on the Allen's door. The truck took off. A late afternoon inquiry to Chesapeake brought the return of the truck and well-traveled News Reviews. No fooling.

The Allen's are presently searching for a new printing company.

For the next few weeks especially, notices of Friday and Saturday events should appear a week in advance—just in case.

Original Comedy Will Be GAC's Next Production

by Sandy Smith

"Small of My Mind," an original comedy by Greenbelt playwright Bruce McDade, has its world premiere in Greenbelt on April 23, at 8 p.m. Performances continue Friday and Saturday through May 8, with a special matinee Sunday, May 2, at 2 p.m. All performances are at the Greenbelt Youth Center.

McDade describes this play as a "comedy with a lot of heart." Its central plot involves friends who have gathered for a wedding. Action focuses on the starts and stops of life. Ramona is about to marry her friend Peannie's ex-husband. As one relationship ends, another begins. The play takes place in a small town in southwestern Virginia which McDade visited some years ago. He described it as a new world for him, an experience and locale different from the usual.

McDade, a drama teacher at Arundel High School, has directed many plays and has been writing plays since high school. He is a graduate of Towson College where his plays won several awards. He has been involved in drama with student and community groups and has lived in Greenbelt for the past year and a half.

Jim Robertson directs "Small of My Mind." He is a veteran director with many directing credits from Greenbelt and other area productions. He just completed directing MacBeth as performed by the Chevy Chase Players. Currently, in addition to the Greenbelt play, he is directing "Social Security" with the NIH Players. Greenbelter Stephanie Wolter is the Assistant Director. She has acted in other Greenbelt Arts Center productions but this is her first chance to direct. As an actress she is often called on to fill in for any missing performers throughout the many rehearsals which have taken place over the past few months. Wolter works at the University of Maryland's University College and is a music major.

Producer Steve Blais is responsible for all aspects of the production. He must coordinate everything from the logistical to the creative. One of his first responsibilities is to find a good location for the play. Since the Greenbelt Arts Center does not have a permanent home now—awaiting the development of the theater as part of the community center—this is an especially challenging assignment. For this play he examined many possible locations from warehouses to churches. It's a difficult assignment to find a location which fits the play's requirements as well as having space for storage of props, a comfortable environment for the audience, and room for the actors to dress and prepare for their roles. Blais is a Greenbelter who was just elected vice president of the Greenbelt Arts Center.

Ginny Zanner is set designer for this show. She has much experience in all functions of dramatic productions, from acting to lighting to costumes. This time she brings her experience to bear in creating the scenes which will support the drama and comedy of the play. She is assisted by Tom Zanner as set

Nature's Parade

Last Sunday, Greenbelt's own Easter parade took place along the shores of Greenbelt Lake in Buddy Attick Park. Unlike the former fashion conscious Fifth Avenue Easter parades in New York City, Greenbelt's was not for the purpose of showing off one's finery, but to see nature's early spring fineries reflected in the lake.

Strolling the shores on that sunny but slightly chilly day were a gathering of persons of all ages with a wide variety of ethnic, religious and racial backgrounds. In peace and harmony, whites, blacks, hispanics, orientals, middle-easterners, Indians, Muslims, Jews, Hindus, Christians and others not so easily classified enjoyed seeing the daffodils in bloom, the quacking of the ducks, the elegant lone swan, the earnest but unsuccessful fishermen at work and the many individuals, couples and family groups encountered along the way. The special bond shared by the strollers resulted in friendly salutations exchanged with passerbys, whether known or strangers.

Greenbelt's Easter parade reflected this city's and this county's cosmopolitan population that lives together and works together, for the most part, in peace and with good will.

It is unfortunate that on the same day in other parts of the world, people of differing cultures, races or religions were killing, maiming and starving each other. Wouldn't it be great if the beauty and harmony of Greenbelt's Easter parade could be shared and experienced with those less fortunate in other parts of this strife torn world?

Ham Slamming!

To the Editor:

If you were in the mood for a turkey tossing, ham slamming, Cottonelle crushing, juice juggling, seafood slipping, money saving, helluva good time you were not disappointed on Saturday, April 10 as Safeway launched its first volley in the war against the new Giant adjacent to Beltway Plaza. Watch out Giant. Victory isn't going to be easy.

At 11:35 p.m. Friday, April 9 a line of people had formed at the doors, eager to take advantage of the 10%-off-your-total-bill Midnight Madness promotion. Only one problem—no carts! My brother (who had reluctantly agreed to join me on this expedition) and I quickly learned that there were hundreds of customers with full carts already inside waiting until the clock struck 12 to check out. After a little "encouragement" from my brother, management wisely decided to let those inside check out before midnight.

Thirty minutes later we entered the Safeway, cart and all. We were greeted by a packed supermarket with impossible aisles and surly patrons. My brother's mission: get in line. My mission: try to do some shopping!

As I squeezed toward the fresh meat section I soon learned that the cart would not fit down the aisles crowded with people waiting in lines to check out. Taking a risk by leaving my cart unattended at the end of the aisles, I scooted down the aisles foraging for food. When it was impossible to even scoot I relied on the good will and team work of those standing in line to pass, hand to hand, customer to customer, the item on my list until it was finally deposited in my cart at the end.

The hot ticket items were specials on hams and turkeys (only six, that's right six, per shopper) and Cottonelle bathroom tissue. The night's "entertainment" included two women tussling over a turkey (it sure beats mud wrestling); a tall man scoring an impressive 12 points as he slam dunked six hams into his cart 15 feet away (sign him up for the All Stars); a nimble senior citizen climbing over a crate (I followed his lead); and two red-faced men pulling a cardboard box containing 12 hams and 12 turkeys (who needs tractor pulls?).

A lull in the excitement was reached in the produce section where there was a grand total of five, count them five, people! I collected my fruits and vegetables and headed back into the masses to find my brother in line.

Rumors from the front line: (1) The managers have removed their badges in order to avoid pesky customers; (2) They are out of turkeys and the truck is half an hour away (How do they know this? Where is the truck?); (3) The new Giant is a ghost town (probably circulated by the allegedly badgeless managers); (4) All prices had been marked up 10% before midnight; and (5) People had come from as far away as Richmond, Virginia to be there.

At 1:40 a.m. our bill was $161.21. After coupons and the 10% discount it was $129.72. Our total savings: $31.49! Safeway may have won the battle, but who will win the war?

Janay Mitchell

On Saturday, April 10, one of Greenbelt's youngest and tiniest residents, died. Janay Briana Mitchell, age nine months, died in her sleep of SIDS, just one day before Easter.

Known by family and neighbors as "the miracle baby," little Janay weighed in at just one pound 10 ounces after being delivered by emergency Cesarean section four months premature on August 2. She survived many complications associated with a premature birth and remained hospitalized in Baltimore for three months before finally coming home to her parents, Kim and Warren, who reside at 26 Crescent Read with their 15 month old son. Recalls a neighbor, "I never thought she would come home alive. Her father would enthusiastically tell me every time she beat doctors' dire predictions. Her mother traveled by cab to visit her daughter and deliver breast milk. This baby touched everyone who held her; there was just something special about her. Even at nine months she was still so small with huge brown eyes and an inquisitive gaze."

Sometime during the early hours on April 10, Janay stopped breathing. Resuscitation efforts by neighbors, paramedics and a team of physicians were not successful. "Her death was especially tragic because she had come so far. Even the doctor who headed the emergency team at the hospital cried," says a neighbor who is seeking community volunteers to form a support group to assist the family after the funeral which is scheduled for Friday, April 16. Interested persons should contact Katherine Adelaide at 513-9183.

dresser and stage hands Harriette Phelps, Mike Ridgeway and Dawn Ridgeway. Phelps is a Greenbelter who has been involved in the many GAC productions and served in many capacities with the Arts Center. The Ridgeways now work for the Defense Department at Fort Meade, after having been transferred recently from the devastated Homestead Air Force Base in Florida. Ben Fisher handles lighting design for this production, as he has for many Greenbelt Arts Center and other community theater productions.

The play features seven women and one man. The performers will be profiled in an upcoming article.

This is the last major production of the Greenbelt Arts Center's 1992-93 Play Series. Seating is limited in the Greenbelt Youth Center so early reservations are recommended. The previous play, "Caine Mutiny Court Martial," performed in the City Council Chambers was sold out and theater goers turned away. For advance reservations and preferred seating call the Arts Line at 441-8770.

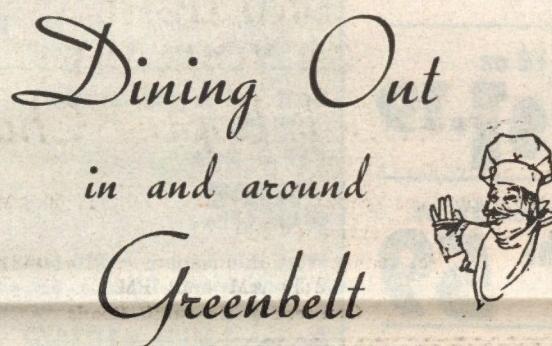

Local Girl Scout Leaders Saluted

As the nation readies to celebrate National Volunteer Week, April 18-24, the Girl Scout Council of the Nation's Capital (GSCNC) salutes Girl Scout Leaders in Greenbelt.

"This year's National Volunteer Week theme—A Chance to Change Tomorrow—embodies the commitment of our Girl Scout Leaders in Greenbelt," said Gina Maier-Manuel, GSCNC Field Manager. "Although children are just 25 percent of the present population, they are 100 percent of the future population. Thanks to Girl Scout Leaders in Greenbelt, girls will be prepared to meet the next century."

During National Volunteer Week, Girl Scouts throughout the U.S. celebrate "Girl Scout Leader's Day" on April 22. Celebrating in Greenbelt are: Donna Alcott, Carol Bordelon, Janet Cantwell, Karen Celdran, Barbara Dupree, Liz Eny, Kathy Gregory Rena Hull, Anne Massino, Deborah Solinas, Denise Toeschel, Dori White and Karen Yoho.

African Heritage EventsScheduled at U of MD

On April 16 at 7:30 p.m., the African Heritage Dancers and Drummers' Junior Company will perform in the Parents' Association Art Gallery in the Stamp Student Union at the University of Maryland.

The troupe, founded in 1960 by its current director, Melvin Deal, is the subject of an exhibition running at the Art Gallery from April 1 to April 30.

The performance will be followed by an open house in the Art Center which is also located in the Stamp Student Union. The open house will showcase works by current Art Center students and faculty and offer an opportunity to meet the instructors of spring and summer adults' classes at the Art Center. Refreshments will be served and both the performance and the open house are free to the public.

For more information about the performance or exhibition contact Celia Brooks at (301) 314-9816. For information about the open house or schedule of summer classes, contact Barbara Tyroler at (301) 314-2787.

Students with DisabilitiesExplore Science Careers

The High School/High Tech program, initially funded by NASA/Goddard Space Flight Center, is a community-based partnership designed to encourage students with disabilities to explore careers in science, engineering, computer programming and other high tech fields. Students will be engaged in a variety of learning experiences. These will include corporate site visits, after school science and technology-related projects, summer employment at Goddard Space Flight Center and experiences to encourage further education and training.

The program will give employers a new source of skilled workers to meet the growing demand for high tech positions in both local and global markets.

"The High School/High Tech program vividly exemplifies NASA's commitment to the successful future of students with disabilities in science and technology," said Dillard Menchan, Chief, Equal Opportunity Program Office, at NASA/Goddard Space Flight Center.

A cornerstone of the program will be six weeks of summer paid employment at Goddard Space Flight Center. Most youth with disabilities never have an opportunity for summer employment. This is anticipated to be an eye opener and motivator on the road to making high technology careers a reality for youth with disabilities.

BUDGET

Recreation/Parks

This is the second largest city budget account. It is slated for a 5.8% increase under Hobbs' budget. Several part-time positions, equivalent to 1.5 full-time positions are proposed to be added, mostly to staff the fitness center when it opens.

The cost of running the pool complex in FY93 was 11% more than authorized in the adopted budget. Such expenses are expected to increase an additional 8.1% in FY94. Major reasons for the overrun include utilities and maintenance.

Hobbs does propose that pool fees be increased eight percent in September to reflect the opening of the fitness center. If council approves the increase, Hobbs estimates that fees will cover 73% of the pool's operating costs, up from 67% in the current fiscal year.

Requests for contributions from recreation groups have increased by 10% to $53,700. The largest requests are for $13,800 (up from $13,000 in FY93) from the Boys and Girls Club, $7,900 (up from $5,500) from the Greenbelt Arts Center, $4,800 (up from $4,060) from the Golden Age Club, and $4,500 (up from $4,000) for the Double Dutch group. Keeping with past practice, Hobbs did not make a specific proposal for contributions, leaving that decision solely to council.

Public Works

Once again the public works account, which comprises 15% of the budget, shows the smallest requested increase, roughly four percent. Several positions will remain vacant. However, an increase in summer help is requested. More funds for training are also requested but trash collection fees would remain steady.

Planning

The planning budget shows the largest requested increase (30%) among the major accounts. However, this increase is due to the introduction of the code enforcement program in January 1993. The costs of this program are, according to the budget document, entirely offset by fees from developers and landlords.

Other Accounts

The general government budget, funding the council and city manager's office, is projected to increase 6.6% to $1.2 million. Greenbelt CARES budget is proposed to increase roughly 8.5% to $242,000. An increase of 8.6%, to $81,000 is requested for miscellaneous expenditures and an increase of 11% is proposed for the city's contributions to reserves. Most of the $722,500 account represents funds set aside for capital improvements, but $100,000 is set aside for other purposes.

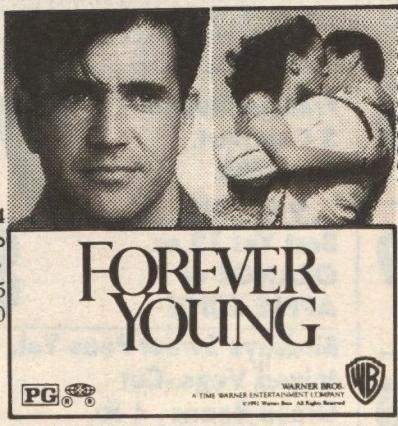

Both taxpayer supported and total debt service payments are projected to decrease slightly from the current fiscal year. Roughly $710,000 in general city revenues will be required to cover the city's bond payments.

Schools Hold Workshop On Summer Activities

The sixth annual Spring Conference on Summer Activities for Parents and Youth will be held on Saturday, April 17 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Kenmoor Middle School, 2500 Kenmoor Drive, Landover. The program is designed to help parents work with their children, of all ages, during the summer vacation. Each of the 17 workshops will be presented twice. Participants may select two workshops, one for the first hour, and one for the second hour.

Seventeen workshops have been planned. For more information call Delpha Royal at 301-386-1545.

The Bellini Ensemble Great Music, Well Done

by Albert K. Herling

The Bellini Ensemble, appearing on April 3 under the sponsorship of the Greenbelt Arts Center, completely captivated the large audience at Mishkan Torah. The four women artists who comprise the Ensemble firmly established this as "the year of the woman." Kathy Birch, cellist; Laura Knutson, violinist; Kathleen Trahan, flutist; and Rachel Turkiewicz, violist were outstanding each in her own right and in combination.

Opening with "Arrival of the Queen of Sheba" from Handel's oratorio "Solomon", the group immediately demonstrated their cohesiveness and the respect each of the instrumentalists had for each other. This was a true ensemble and none attempted to outshine any other. The composition was taken at a good tempo and served as a great introduction to the evening. A Schubert Trio in B-flat Major served as bridge between the classical and romantic periods.

Laura Knutson provided an impressive solo performance in her rendition of J. S. Bach's Suite for Solo Violin. The clarity in her playing demonstrated her mastery of the instrument. Her technical ability served her well in displaying her understanding of the composition.

A truly remarkable composition by Francois Devienne, a French flutist and composer, Sonata in F Major gave flutist Trahan and cellist Birch an opportunity to display their abilities. Trahan painted impressionistic pictures in sound giving substance to what Grove's Musical Dictionary calls Devienne's "elegant melodic style." Cellist Kathy Birch responded in kind in this musical conversation between the two instruments.

The wonderful lower registers of the cello provided the necessary contrast with the lighter and higher register of the flute.

A "Passacaglia" by Handel, arranged for violin and viola by Halvorsen, opened the second half of the program. Again the audience was treated to a wonderful display of agreement as to interpretation between Violist Rachel Turkiewicz and Laura Knutson on the violin.

The ensemble offered the Andante from the Quartet in E-flat Major by Carl von Dittersdorf. This was followed by a Trio Sonata in G Minor by J. J. Quantz.

To conclude the program we were treated to a Flute Quartet in D Major by W. A. Mozart performed with total respect for this impressive work.

The Greenbelt Arts Center is to be congratulated for bringing to our community this high calibre ensemble and we must thank producer Sid Kastner for an exceptional evening.

Cooperative Efforts Upgrade Stream At Greenbelt Park

Watersheds come in all sizes and types. Some of the most impacted lie in the suburbs of major urban areas, where development can occur at a break-neck pace, eradicating valuable forest land. In Prince Georges County, Md., lies Greenbelt Park, a popular 1,100-acre oasis lying in a heavily developed watershed of 3,200 acres. Its problems typical of suburban watersheds, are the focus of a cooperative effort of which ICPRB is a part.

With the cooperation of the state and county governments, work by the National Park Service and ICPRB is helping to revive and protect the stream.

Stormwater control in the watershed of a small feeder stream within the Anacostia basin is meager. Stream degradation also has occurred from a small mountain of clean construction fill on land donated to the park several years ago. In the last few years, the hill has exhibited serious erosion problems despite efforts to stabilize it with plantings of grass and trees. Storm runoff has cut large gullies into the side of the hill, carrying sediment that threatens the already-impacted stream.

Research on the watershed has included modeling to assess runoff impacts on the stream, biological assessments, analysis of sediments for toxics, and inventory of runoff problem sites for the entire watershed, and a list of volunteer restoration projects. Plans for work in the park include construction of wetland buffer areas that can be used as interpretive resources by park staff. Turning this under-used portion of the park can help instill the worth of watershed management on citizens living in an area where a wooded place to recreate is becoming increasingly valuable.

JOE'S TIPS OF THE WEEK

Hello again ! ! !

A common repair request is for a front end alignment because the vehicle shakes or vibrates at highway speeds. However, in most instances vibration merely means the wheels are out of balance by not having been rotated in the proper time frame. Here are some facts that might help you diagnose your front end and wheel condition:

1. A vibration at highway speeds only when the brakes are applied means warped brake rotors or brake drums, not a wheel balance or front end problem.

2. A shake or shimmy that steadily increases in intensity in accordance with road speed, provided all components are proper in the chassis area, most likely is a wheel balance condition.

3. A pulling to one side of the road or the other is a front end alignment condition. To determine if your car drifts or pulls in such a fashion, carefully let go of the steering wheel on a safe and flat road and not under acceleration.

4. Tires showing abnormal wear are generally related to a front end alignment condition. Feather-edging of tire tread, where one side of tread is worn more than the other, is a sign that an alignment is needed.

5. Improper air pressure will also cause tire wear. As the weather changes a temperature change takes place within the tire causing the air pressure to expand or contract.

Always:

- a. Check air pressure when tires are cold or in a cool state.
- b. Keep constant preventive maintenance scheduling on tire rotation.
- c. At every maintenance inspection visually inspect front end.
- d. Re-balance all four tires on a yearly basis or at least consistently with mileage.

TILL NEXT TIME
THINK PREVENTIVE MAINTENANCE ! !
